For the moment, the interest in Morocco has been overshadowed by the acuter interest in Tripoli, just as the interest in Albania was originally overcast by the interest in Morocco. We are assured daily that the Moroccan question is approaching a solution or that a settlement is in sight. Europe has grown used to that term during recent months, and has discovered it to be a facon de parler and nothing else Today, we are told that the only practical question which now remains to be determined is that of the amount of territory to be ceded to Germany on the Congo, and that there will probably be some disagreement over this. It might truly be said that, if this is the case the Morocco question is almost in statu quo, since the question of the cession of territory on the Congo is practically the crux of the whole matter. In reality, all these phrases are but a method of covering up the fact that the conversations between Herr von Kiderlen-Waechter and Monsieur Cambon have been shrouded, as has repeatedly been pointed out in these columns, in complete secrecy. As a whole the men are showing better team work; and have improved in defensive work against the forward pass. The interference afforded the man with the ball by the backfield has been of high order, and this, with the speed of the backs, makes it very hard for opponents to tackle effectively. The forward pass is also being handled very much better, the passes being made with a precision that is in top notch form. It depends on the tackles, whose business it is to box the ends, on forward passes, to make these plays at all sure. ever witnessed in a world's series. It was brimful of excitement from beginning to end and kept the spectators on edge until the last man was out in the eleventh inning. Coombs, the hero of the 1910 series, was in the box for the Athletics and he pitched a masterly game all the way. Except for the eleventh inning, New York could do little or nothing with his delivery. He received almost faultless support and but for the wonderful work of the Giants at critical times his margin of victory would have been even greater than it was.

Baker, the third baseman of the Athletics, again proved to be the real hero of the contest. His home run in the ninth inning gave his team the first run and the one that carried the game to extra innings. His hit in the eleventh paved the way for the second run for his side, and he scored the winning run hims. If on Davis' fine single. He also played fine game in the field.

more or less accurately to some one or other of the numerous guesses which have found their way into the press of

Today the same stream of surmise is of the meager admissions which have been made by the Italian government as to the action of its fleet in the Mediterranean. Everything else is purely in the nature of guesswork, and Tripoli was bombarded quite an unnatural number of times in the course of the first four days of hostilities. The foreign correspondents of The Christian Science Monitor have supplied its readers with entirely accurate information, from absolutely authoritative sources, as to the claims and denials of the parties to the struggle over Tripoli, and these claims and denials must have done much to give those who have studied them an accurate view of the immediate situation. Behind all this there lie, however, the real causes of the difficulties in the Mediterranean, and these hinge upon those questions of higher politics which are no secret to the well informed. though it by no means necessarily follows that they are allowed to obtain publicity without careful editing.

What is puzzling the chancelleries of Europe today, so far as the near eastern question is concerned, is the real strength of Muhammadanism. The United Kingdom, as the greatest Muhammadan power in the world; is the most vitally interested in this, but other governments are forced to take it seriously into their calculations. That a united Europe could sweep the Ottoman empire across the Dardanelles, is undoubtedly true, but a united Europe is the exact thing that the Ottoman empire has not got to fear. Hence these intrigues, politely known as diplomatic negotiations, undertaken for securing the ear of the Sultan. What no one knows, probably not even the Sublime Porte itself, is the amount of fanaticism which would be Entertainment, Howard L. Bennett, Holet loose by the hoisting of the green bart E. At the same time, it is only necessary to think reasonably for a few moments in order to realize how supremely ridiculous is the charge against the United Kingdom. The United Kingdom, of all countries in the world, is, in the first place, the one with lease reason to wish to see the Muhammadan question stirred up, and, in the second place, it could scarcely serve the tradition of English sea policy in the Mediterranean to have the French bases of Toulon, Algiers and Bizerta at the western extremity, duplicated by the Italian pases at Spezia and Tripoli in the mid-Mediterranean, especially as it is the avowed aim of Italian nationalism to gain possession of Malta, and so dom inate the whole western and eastern ends of that sea.

The fact is that Italy, as has before that such an opportunity as that which occurred in the last hours of September, was never likely to occur again; for those hours saw England, France, and Germany engaged in the unsolved question of Morocco, at a moment when Germany was casting about for a quid pro quo in Tripoli, but was not in a position forcibly to support her claims.

had incited Italy to take this step, with the object of breaking up the triple alliance, driven home by bitter references to Italian policy as nothing better than that of a freebooter.

In all probability, no party to an alliance has ever expressed itself through its press with quite the same disregard for the feelings of another party, and the action of Italy, followed by the executive board, Mrs. Minnie J. Ayres of Rhode Island for the corresponding secretary, Miss Emma J. Foster of Massachusetts. The Rev. Marguerite Hess of Texas responded. Reports of various committees with quite the same disregard for the feelings of another party, and the action of Italy, followed by the church of Germany, can searcely have chusetts for the treasurer, Mrs. Virginia H. Brown of Massachusetts for the pubishing committee.

Mrs. Theresa A. Williams of Washingon, president of the alliance, delivered her address on the achievements of the organization in the last two years and outlined the work it hopes to do in the future. Reports on the following activities were made: Church building loan fund, Mrs. Alice J. Allen, Vermont; traveling loan libraries, Mrs. Maud B. Cobb, onnecticut; postoffice mission, Mrs. Mary W. Huntley, New York; Sunday school work, Mrs. Minnie J. Ayres, Rhode Island; committee on life memberships, Mrs. Maud B. Cobb, Connecticut. The Rev. Willard O. Bodell gave a report on the work being done in North Carolina, and been pointed out in these columns, saw the Rev. Francis A. Kimball of Vermont an address on "How a Transient Was Impressed," Miss Agnes M. Hathaway of Japan reported on work being done in that country.

The afternoon session will open with a rollcall of the states, and the program includes an address on "The Spirit in the Wheels" by the Rev. Effie K. IT has been asserted repeatedly that a shoe manufacturer cannot obtain any of the machines of the United Shoe Machinery Company without agreeing to take all his machines from the Company. This assertion is not true and it never was true. In the case of only a few machines is the use of one dependent upon the use of any other. The use of most of the machines thus tied is given to a lessee without the payment of any royalty whatever, in order to enable him to produce the largest possible quantity of the shoes he makes and bring them to the highest point of perfection. On some of these machines a nominal annual rental is charged, ranging from $5 to $35, insufficient to reimburse the Company for the depreciation of its machines.

> At the New England Fair in the Mechanics Building is a complete shoemaking plant, with sixty ma-chines of the Company in actual operation making women's high grade Goodyear Welt Shoes.

Visit the Fair and learn for yourself the terms upon which the shoe manufacturer enjoys the use of each machine.

Gets ALL the Dirt

down in carpets and rugs-dirt which Brooms, Carpet Sweepers and Dusters can never get.

In the case of upholstery, beating, pounding and dusting tends to drive the dirt in deeper, finally discoloring and ruining the furniture.

The RICEMOND Vacuum Cleaning System sucks the dirt out and renovates the inaccessible places behind the cloth covering.

Carpets and rugs that are swept with brooms and carpet sweepers grow worn out and threadbare because the dirt and grit with its knife like edges shears off the fine nap leaving the bare warp in view.

Only by vacuum cleaning can carpets and rugs be kept free from this cutting grit. That is why in instance after instance it has been proven that RICHMOND VACUUM CLEANING TREBLES THE LIFE OF CARPETS AND RUGS.

Do not imagine that floor sweep-which the EICHMOND Vacuum Cleaning System will bring. It can be used for cleaning curtains, the walls and ceilings, behind radiators and beds, bedding or clothing. In fact for re-moving the dust from every portion of the building from top to bottom.

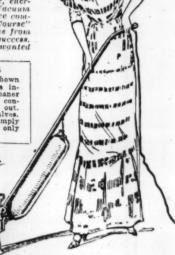

RICHMOND Vacuum Cleaning can be installed in any building large or small, old or new, town or country. Wherever installed it will pay for itself in from eighteen to thirty months.

RICHMOND Vacuum Cleaning embraces every provedly successful type of apparatus. It includes Hand Cleaners for $29.00; Ten Pound Bortable Electric Cleaners for $73.00; and Stationary Plants which can be installed complete for $275.00 and up-wards—all on our "Easy Payment Plan;" or a liberal discount will be allowed for cash.

BOSTON Y. M. C. A. EXTENDING WORK IN EDUCATION OF THE IMMIGRANTS

Immigrants assembled under the auspices of the Boston Y. M. C. A. in basement of church to learn English

Education of the immigrants who come to this country yearly is the work which the Young Men's Christian Association is extending each year and the Boston headquarters plan a systematic course for this season in the Greek, Italian, Hebrew, Syrian and Lithuanian sections which has the indorsement of the consuls of the countries represented.

This is the result of the beginning made in 1910-11. but which was not based on any well defined lines of de velopment. Social and educational cen ters have been planned in four sections of the city, among the Greek people of the South End, the Italian people of the North End, the Hebrew people of the West End and the Lithuanians of South Boston. The first two have already been

The Greek center was organized at a meeting Monday, Oct. 9. The first Greek class had a meeting on the following Thursday evening in the basement of the Greek church on Winchester street. The Italian classes met on Oct. 16.

All of the work is to be done by the association members, such as young lawyers, business men, students and others. The committees at the head of the work in each community are made up of the leading men of that nationality including the consuls

The work is divided into three classes-English, civics and hygiene, following the system of Peter Roberts, secretary of the immigration section of the inter-In each center from two to three classes week are to be held with social evenings at least once a month. ## LATE COTTON

AUSTIN, Tex.-With the exception of a few cool days weather conditions have been ideally favorable for lates cotton production the last few weeks and no good grounds exist for revising the estimate that the total yield of Texas will exceed 4,000,000 bales. That the figures will reach 4.250,000 bales is the belief of men who are in close touch with the situation over the state. Many farmers are beginning to hold their cotton for higher prices. Slow marketing is reported from all points.

Texas ginners are showing little observance of the law that requires monthly reports of number of bales ginned to state department of agriculture. The ncomplete report just issued by the 868 bales ginned during September, make ing a total of 1,443,243 for the season. This is believed to be fully 1,500,000 bales short of bales ginned to Oct. 1.

As every one knows, there are a large number of tendril-climbers. A tendril may be in its origin a portion of a leaf, as in the common pea, stipules or basal leaf appendages as in smilax, a modified stem axis as in grape or Virginia creeper. In the last the branching tendrils expand at their ends into circular adhesive disks, which cling with very great tenacity especially to rock surfaces. The extremely ornamental Japa-

Some one has spoken of the joy he found sitting in "the rich silence" of Emerson, who obeyed more or less strictly his creed that he would not descend to meet people in trivial talk, but would wait for some word of high import. If we are today so concerned over time saving that we telephone and telegraph and send impatient word by wireless, might one not expect to behold us saving some of the time now wasted in saying nothing? Of all the conversational effort ever recorded in a talking machine, the saying of nothing is the most noisy. Can there be better discipline for the limber-tongued than a single hour's test: Let us speak nothing but that which is really worth while What saving of time and temper were here-and yes, one agrees readily, of printer's ink.

Many beautiful roads run through the forest and across the open moor, where Queen Victoria loved to drive, and where Queen Mary often walks with her children. America and China

The American consul at Hankow knew of the uprising four days before it came. The American military attache is the only foreigner permitted to go with the troops to the south. If these reports be facts, they are symbolical of special trust reposed by the Chinese in Americans in China and in the United States; and this though the Manchu dynasty is fully aware that much of the intellectual and ethical idealism and ferment that account for the uprising came straight from the schoolrooms of American educators in China and the colleges and universities of the United States where Chinese "patriots" have studied. Much of the money, also, that is financing the revolution comes from Chinese in the United States.

But official America is friendly with China; has befriended her when she stood alone and defenseless; has returned excessive indemnity; has induced nominal if not actual adherence by Europe and Japan to an open-door policy of trade within the empire; and is on record as favoring the preservation rather than the partition of the vast domain. It will be to the United States therefore, rather than to Japan, that both parties in China will turn now for counsel and sympathy; the officials in Peking for such action as will induce the powers to hold off while the rebels are being dealt with, and the revolutionists for such approval by public opinion as they expect from a people that came into national existence by formal revolution and by casting off a dynasty.

Each party is likely to be satisfied. American public opinion seems to be as naturally with the foes of the Manchu rulers and with the advocates of Chinese self-rule as it was with the Japanese when Russia attempted to crowd the orientals of Nippon off the map. Washington officials likewise will doubtless cast their weight, at Peking with those diplomats who will urge that the domestic issue, grave as it is, shall not be made the excuse for exploitation of China by any covetous neighbors. So long as both parties to the strife protect foreigners and their property, the issue of foreign intervention is not likely to arise. If protection ceases, and there be any recurrence of the anti-foreign feeling, then the United States also can be counted upon to insist that China shall not be made to suffer unduly.

Acceptance by Yuan Shi-Kai of the rule over the revolting central provinces no doubt was conditioned on pledges of reform at Peking, should he restore order, though at the expense of defeat of the revolutionists with whom he has much in common. But events may prove that not even he can check the storm or control the troops with which the victory must be won, if won at all. He has played the game of moderation and opportunism so long that neither side appears fully to trust him, and his second alliance with the dynasty in its hour of need can scarcely endear him to the revolutionists, with whose ultimate aim he has considerable sympathy but whose methods he cannot approve. It is to be hoped that he has no reason to suspect the loyalty of the troops with which he sets forth from Peking to down the rebellion, for he cannot win this issue by homilies on moderation in reform.

THE dinner tonight at the City Club, under the auspices of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, will further New England's interests, we trust, by discussion of some of the larger aspects of its present and future development, as they are influenced by national policies. Congressman Foster of Vermont has chosen to speak on the arbitration policy of President Taft, which has its economic as well as a sentimental import. Rear Admiral

Advancing New England

Bowles also will trench on national policy as affecting local welfare in his discussion of New England shipbuilding. Right action by Congress toward restoring a merchant marine would revive many a town that once was a builder of ships that carried New England's fame around the world. Of the other topics to be discussed they are more distinctly local, but they all are vital; and it is the sign of a new era in local affairs that they are being discussed so continuously and ably by men of the weight of those now enlisted in making Boston the great port and commercial center that nature seems to have meant her to be.

"Fifth Avenue in Ruins"

NEW YORK CITY continues to pay the price of greatness. It was not content as a Dutch village or as an English town; or as a comfortable little city that snuggled down around the Battery, or as a thriving and bustling city whose well-to-do merchants had country places along the Bowery; nor yet as a large city whose rows of brick-front business houses stretched from Castle Garden clear up to Chambers street, later to Tenth street. No; it had to become a Greater city; it had to cover all of Manhattan and a large part of several of the surrounding boroughs. And it is not yet done with growing.

But its growth is not really the worst of it. Growth has driven the green patches and the trees and the vacant lots out of the district that less than forty years ago stretched between the residences of the merchant princes and Central park. It has overshadowed the downtown churchyards and the uptown squares with buildings that reach to the sky. It has substituted a wilderness of brick apartment houses for the pretty dwellings that once housed its ample population. But, on the whole, growth has contributed to the adornment as well as to the prosperity and comfort of its inhabitants. What annoys, and irritates, and hurts, is that many of the best things that came with growth are being obliterated by improvement. Improvement is the thing most city dwellers everywhere dread. When improvement comes along, it stops at nothing. On Fifth avenue, New York, it has torn the beautiful facades out of magnificent residences as ruthlessly as it has torn up the curbing along the street. It has "set everything back" without caring a fig whether it was church or palace. It has razed costly railings and ripped up costly copings. It has so changed the beautiful avenue that the New, Yorker who knew it a year ago and who rejoiced in it for a saunter, and delighted to brag about it when abroad, would not know it if he saw it today.

But today it is looking its wors. Its look is such that one of the

New York newspapers heads an item with the words, "Fifth Avenue in Ruins." Of course, it is not really in ruins. It is simply being improved. It is being improved to such an extent that it is practically impassable for intervals of many blocks. Incredible as it may seem, even the motor omnibuses have had to turn from Fifth avenue to some other route during the last few days.

In a few months all will be well with Fifth avenue again. Everything, that is, will have been improved. The street will have been widened and the fronts and facades will have been restored. Meanwhile other streets will have their turn at improvement. For New York city will continue to grow; and the improvements of yesterday will not do at all for today. Then when all the other streets shall have been improved, it will be as clear as daylight to those in authority that Fifth avenue must be improved again to keep up with the times—that is, with the march of improvement—but, let us hope, this will be some distance in the future, and not until New York shall have entirely recovered from the present upheaval.

THERE is no room for reasonable doubt as to the lasting quality of many modern achievements. It may be safely assumed that the discoveries and inventions of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries will go down to the ages. It is questionable, however, whether present-day record of these achievements will long endure. We do not write on stone as did the ancients; we do not even write on papyrus or parchments; we even write on papyrus or parchments; we write and print on paper that soon yellows, dries, crumbles. Let anybody who questions the perishable character of modern records take down from the shelves a book or a newspaper file of twenty years ago and see for himself how insecurely preserved are the chronicles of our times.

Modern

History in

Storage

A Modern Historic Records Association has been organized in New York by people of distinction who have given serious thought to the question of preserving for future generations what might be called the running history of our day. This association declares in its prospectus that it proposes to advocate, promote and systematize the "employment of all possible mechanical means that will insure the preservation of the completest possible records of the present for the information of the future." To this end, the aid of the camera, the phonograph, the vitascope, and other mechanical inventions still to come, is to be called into service, and by these means it is proposed to secure enduring records.

The movement inaugurated by the New York organization is highly commendable; it should spread. Modern civilization has done and is doing much for the advancement of humanity and the good it is doing is certain to survive all changes. But as we regret the dimness of the past, and as we welcome every little ray of light which research throws upon it, in an equal degree should this age, so far as it is possible, preserve for the centuries to come such data as will enable their generation to learn how we thought and planned and labored. The uncertainty, the doubt, the mystery already enveloping the lives and works of some of the greatest figures of the Elizabethan period should be at once a sufficient warning and a sufficient incentive in this connection.

Some recent experiences have taught us that neither museums nor cornerstones are safe receptacles of treasures or records of the past. We are all conscious of the fact that in our times, whether things are built to last or not, they are not lasting in the sense that they can be expected to survive as have the vaults and pyramids and architectural piles of older civilizations. Even the records which the New York association proposes to collect must finally be stored, and here is really where the great problem arises. It is one of the problems upon which modern ingenuity may well concentrate its thought and energy.

A CLOCK-WORK street-car advertising device is about to be introduced in Brooklyn, the advantage of which will lie in the fact that more street-car advertising can be handled by its use than under the present system. This may be all right, if it does not interfere with the comfort of street-car patrons. But we shall stand up stoutly against the use of any alarm in that clock thing. A clock alarm that enables us to catch the car is well enough, but a clock that would keep us awake all the way into town would be a public nuisance.

MR. UNDERWOOD'S statement that the people of the United States are paying $104,000,000 a year subsidy to the wool trust is certain to be subjected to very close analysis, much closer, indeed, than it would be if we were not approaching a critical political period. It will be interesting to see how it will work out in the light of information gathered by the tariff board.

THE question of allowing American vessels going from coast to coast to pass through the Panama canal without toll has not yet been settled, but it comes next in importance to the opening of the waterway. The real point for the American ship-owner, of course, is whether the Panama canal is to be helpful to the American shipper.

IN AUSTRALIA the federal Senate is considering the advisability of adopting certain American election methods that Americans are thinking seriously of discarding. No exactly appropriate name for universal unrest has yet been found or invented. But it manifestly needs one that will be comprehensive.

It is always good news to learn that a political campaign is to be short and sharp. Where elections come as often as they do in Massachusetts, campaigns that are not short and sharp are almost likely to overlap.

"With grateful acknowledgment to my friends and benedictions upon the profession," says a Missouri editor about to change his calling, "I take my hat—the savings of seventeen years in the newspaper field—and retire." Everything considered, he might have left his hat.

THERE is supposed to be a law in operation in New York state that provides for the gradual elimination of the grade crossing, but nobody, it seems, supposed it to be intended to operate quite so gradually.

Ere the jury for the trial of the McNamaras at Los Angeles is empaneled the country bids fair to be forced to serious consideration of phases of the problem that have been increasing in gravity during the past decade. All the higher agencies of society are busy creating an electorate as intelligent, well informed and discreet as may be. It is a fundamental principle of democracy that education of the people is vital, and that

Fitness for Jury Service they are to be made aware of contemporary history and are to be encouraged to have views and convictions about it. In the theory of the jury, as an organ of society through which a man's peers pass judgment on his acts, there is nothing that conflicts at all with the premise of democracy demanding intelligence and independence of thought among the people. But in practise there is fast coming to be. Judicial laxity, legislative sentimentality and lawyers' covetousness for professional power have permitted to come to pass a method of empaneling juries which puts a premium on ignorance and indifference to civic issues, and results in giving to counsel for defendants in criminal cases juries that are peculiarly susceptible to the devices of artful special pleaders.

Contrasted with methods of getting juries in Great-Britain and her colonies, the American method seems scandalously prolonged, expensive and inefficient, unfair to the commonwealth that tolerates it and to taxpayers that pay the bills, if not to the parties who abide by its decisions. The ideal juror is a man whose interest as a citizen has led him to inform himself as fairly as possible as to what has happened and to come to a tentative conclusion awaiting formal presentation of evidence, holding himself in honor bound to form a final judgment in the light of testimony carefully weighed. The juror that is too often permitted to take a place in the box is illiterate, weak, uninformed as to contemporary events, lacking in capacity to deal adequately with the conflicting statements of witnesses, and an easy mark for a specious, sentimental criminal lawyer.

Nor is this all that cries out for reform in the methods of jury selection today. Candidates are challenged or passed, as never formerly, because of their class affiliations, the amount of their property, their ignorance or their knowledge of law, their known or suspected close or remote relations with capital or labor. Here, as so often is to be noted in these times, the system needs men of principle if it is to maintain its proverbial justice and efficacy.

Heading the Harbor Commission GEN. HUGH BANCROFT, who has been selected by Governor Foss to head the Boston harbor commission, has conceded executive ability, vigor in initiative, closeness to sources of capital that may be needed in cooperation with the state in expanding the port's facilities, and a record of hearty cooperation with the Boston Chamber of Commerce and the Pilgrim Publicity Association in all their recent efforts to boom Boston and New England. He has not the years nor the practical experience in handling large public interests which some appointees might have brought to the constructive tasks that lie ahead; but he has a habit of "making good" that is encouraging, and when he puts his hand to the plow he does not turn back. If given expert aid and experienced counselors in the other members of the commission, he can be counted upon, we believe, for getting results. This commission cannot too soon be named and set at work. The Legislature has made generous provision for first steps. Local public opinion of a favoring kind is well organized and is ready to back up prompt and sane leadership. Now for acton.

RECENT evidence given to the public of the unsatisfactory product of the examination system by which young men find their way to the doors of the national military academy at West Point has revived discussion of the place of the examination in education. Charles Francis Adams, conspicuous in the fray for a generation, emerges to remark that his study of the facts at Harvard led him long since to believe that examinations are neither adequate, nor satisfactory in determining "either the present qualifications or future capacity of candidates." Force and superficial readiness, he says, equip many applicants to win who have a facility during examination never shown in daily classroom drill or in later career.

Signs of the times point to a marked reaction against the formal examination as the test of scholastic standing, whether for admission to scholastic privilege or to its retention. Harvard has taken significant action lately by rating higher the testimony of a secondary school's faculty as to the fitness of an applicant and diminishing the amount of required formal examination for entrance; and President Hamilton of Tufts goes so far as to say that any evidence that the applicant may make as to maturity and attainment should be invited; that applicants should be considered as individuals, not as "cases"; and that where there is any doubt the real test of moral right to enter on a given academic career should be "ability to do the work and not ability to satisfy entrance requirements."

Of course this means reversion to individualism in education. Such reversion would be impracticable in many large institutions. But its discussion is a sign of the times, indicative of a trend that is likely to militate in favor of colleges or universities that first align with it.

Over in the province of Szechuen, China, the authorities will not permit even censored news to be sent out. This seems like keeping things pretty close, but China is not the first nation to practise absolute suppression. The remarkable thing is that, with all the present facilities for news distribution, suppression is possible.
